

MOVERS

Cindy Cullen, associate director of digital certificate services for Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., has been named chief technology officer of the SAFE-BioPharma Association, Fort Lee. The SAFE-BioPharma Association is the non-profit association of large pharmaceutical companies. Before working at Bristol-Myers Squibb, she spent 12 years at Telcordia Technologies, where her titles included director of security and fraud solutions and of operations support systems applications architecture. Cullen also is an adviser to the National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee.

■
John Hook has been named director of compliance and professional standards for Gateway Security, Newark. He had been a laboratory director and fingerprint department manager for the New Jersey State Police, where he worked for 30 years.

■
Stephen J. Long, 41, has been elected vice president-general counsel and secretary for medical products manufacturer C.R. Bard, Murray Hill. He had been a staff vice president and associate general counsel. Earlier, he was a lawyer for Warner-Lambert Co.

■
Jacqueline A. Totten has been appointed vice president-global sales for mPhase Technologies, Little Falls, a software manufacturer. Before her current job, she served in sales executive leadership positions at AT&T and Lucent Technologies.

